A Daily Twice A Week

Vol. 111 No. 98 | Cameron, Milam County, Texas, Monday, February 22, 1971 | 10¢ Per Copy | 8 Pages Today

Now

A second letter from an Iowa daily newspaper tells how they are converting their 45,000 - circulation publication to computer in September.

We are beginning to get inquiries from around the country. It is most interesting to see the vanguard of interest developing in an industry which until recent years was married to one technology. Now there are many.

A field trip from the University of Texas Journalism School is scheduled, we are advised. And this thing is off and running.

We are also beginning to receive numerous letters from former residents, some of whom have been gone for 50 years, who are astounded and pleased that Cameron is resolving its downtown problem and planning other major changes.

It is pleasant to see those long years of work of the 60s coming to major fruition in the 70s. Somehow, we always thought it would happen. It did.

NOW-NOW-NOW

Everybody has a hobby, a fascination, an outlet. The Herald's is becoming computers.

In approaching a solution to problem, major or minor, one of the first things that must go is one's ego. He assumes he knows too little about a situation, regardless how much prior knowledge there is.

NOW-NOW-NOW

In the case of Cameron's obvious evolution into a small city in the next few years, the problem was to assume we either "got in or got out."

Cameron decided somewhere in the early 60s that it could do what it had convinced itself for at least half a century it didn't need or couldn't do.

And when someone raised the question of how, it was quite academic in view of the fact that thousands of communities this size already had faded to time. And it became obvious the solution would be resolved by the logic of a drowning man who earnestly wanted to live, but who knew his "third time" was coming up.

The drowning man, like the small town in difficulty if not headed for community disaster, doesn't look at whose hand is extended. He takes it. And he survives, to grow and live again.

That may be analogous to what Cameron has done. Not many towns have the courage to go for the future when they mostly have lived in the past. But Cameron, in fact, is doing it without forgetting origins.

We have able, courageous people in this community. When cotton's demise was fact, we began to look elsewhere. And it was a long look. But we saw light industry and a downtown improvement and new hospitals and resthomes and new streets and better schools and all the rest you see newly abuilding around us.

If ever anyone asks what happened in Cameron in the mid and late 1960s, you might tell them:

"We decided we would never give up."

MOVING DAY for St. Edward Hospital employees Mrs. Betty Zelisko and Mrs. Kathryn Matula started Friday and continued through the weekend in preparation for moving hospital patients into the new medical facility Monday. The move into the $1 million hospital was delayed more than a month awaiting delivery of some equipment, but moving day was planned to be as quick and to avoid any confusion Monday.

CORRECTION

Alfred Burt of Cameron said The Herald added 40 some years to his age when his name was mistakenly used in a feature about John Kennon, veteran horse shoer. Kennon operated a horse shoeing business on the courthouse square about 50 years ago and holds the nation's speed record for shoeing a horse.

German Folk Group To Dance On TV

May 20 Date Among Schedule For Fete Dancers

Charles Kunz, sponsor - manager of the Cameron German Folk Dancers, will appear in yet another presentation of ethnic German dance on KWTX-TV May 20.

Carolyn Perkins has joined the 16-member dance group, Kunz told The Herald, bringing the group to 18 members and allowing extras to fill in for out-of-town engagements.

The Czech dance group also has appeared throughout the Central Texas area and appeared at the State Fair in Dallas last October with other Czech folk dance groups from Ennis.

DANCERS

German dancers include: Albert Michalka, Stewart Perkins, Bruce Crook, J. C. Komar, Charles Hundle, James Burnett, Michael Trdy, Michael Posival, Margarite Michalka, Bobby Perkins, Shirley Crook, Leola Komar, Jeanette Hundle, Cindy Mitchan, Kathy Matula and Becky Hanel.

Kunz said the group is considering working with a polka band of volunteer musicians at Yoe High School, headed by director Dalton Harbers. He said music would have to be made available for the instrumental group to match numbers used by the dance group.

After the June, 1970, Folk Fete, the German group appeared at Temple St. Mary's Catholic Parish Hall, the Seton Hall SPJST Public Picnic, the Marak Public Picnic, the Taylor SPJST Public Picnice.

Other appearances scheduled are at a Temple Senior Citizens group March 14 and a return to Seton Hall for a performance at an RGOS Insurance function.

SEVEN GROUPS

Ethnic dance groups appearing at the Cameron Folk Fete next June will represent Irish, German, Czech, Negro, Italian, Western and Mexican folk dancing.

DRUG EDUCATION at Yoe High School took a first step Friday morning in a planning session that brought ideas from students and faculty about involving the community in drug education program. Miss Jo Ann Fudge of the Educational Service Center, Huntsville (third from right) directed the session. Drug Education will be required in Texas high schools beginning next year. Most students believed that community involvement would be difficult because of a feeling that "it couldn't happen here." Additional planning sessions will be held this year in preparation for the 1971-72 school program.

FFA Program Trains Tomorrow's Leaders

Milam County FFA members will join the more than 38,000 boys in 1,100 state FFA chapters in observing National FFA Week, February 20-27.

C. Titsworth, advisor for the Yoe High FFA chapter, said "FFA is organized vocational education on a farm youth level." Improved agriculture, better local communities, a more satisfying farm home life, and more efficient farmer-citizens are emerging as a result of the boys' experiences.

The 142 Yoe FFA members are learning community cooperation while they gain practical experience through regular beautification projects on the school grounds. With a tractor donated by Milam Tractor Co. they also do custom jobs in the community. Chapters in Buckholts, Milano, Thorndale, Rockdale and Rogers have similar community projects such as spraying pecan trees, tree trimming and clearing land.

FFA not only gives a boy a chance to learn better farm skills, it gives him a chance for recognition. During the past year 89 students from the Cameron Yoe FFA Chapter have received recognition on the area, district, state and national level.

To be a Future Farmer, a boy must first have enrolled in a vocational agriculture class to receive instruction in farm crops, livestock, poultry, farm mechanics, parliamentary procedure, current farm problems, cooperative part-time training.

The FFA was organized on a national level during 1928 and in Texas in 1929.

It was born of a need to assist deserving students become established in their farming projects, to promote and stimulate agriculture leadership, to develop public interest in vocational agriculture, and to provide prizes and awards for students achieving distinction in various phases of agriculture.

FFA members, through active participation in chapter activities, also learn how to conduct and take part in public meetings, how to speak in public, how to solve their own problems, and how to assume civic responsibilities. The foundation upon which the FFA organization is built includes the development of agriculture leadership, citizenship, and cooperation.

The FFA is a non-profit, non-political farm youth organization with voluntary membership. It constitutes one of the most efficient agricultural teaching devices that has been discovered up to the present time. It is 100 percent American in its outlook, has no outside affiliation, and there is no secrecy in connection with any of its activities.

Belton Sends POW Delegate

BELTON

Funds were raised in Belton this week to send a local delegate to a meeting with North Vietnamese officials regarding release of American Prisoners of War. Dr. J. G. Sewell was selected to represent Belton on the mission lead by Ross Perot, Dallas industrialist, and Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes. Ross hopes to have enough delegates from Texas to fill three 747 jets. He said he wanted delegation to be made up of individuals other than POW relatives. Belton was the first community in the state to name a delegate.

An option has been taken on approximately 1000 acres of land between Round Rock and Georgetown for an unnamed manufacturing firm and the city of Round Rock has agreed to run water and sewer lines to the plant and area. Speculation is that the plant will employ 700 and housing will be developed near the site.

For Tomato Grower

Experiment Becomes Occupation

A hot house tomato plant experiment in a make-shift minature 'greenhouse' has grown into a full time occupation for Forrest Green who is producing an average of 1,500 pounds of tomatoes a week in three greenhouses at Buckholts.

The original make-shift greenhouse bears but slight resemblance to the modern "bubble" house, the latest of Green's three hot houses.

His original hot houses were of standard arched pipe and polyethylene construction. Before building the third house, Green experimented with a small bubble house - a sheet of polyethylene secured to the ground and suspended by forced air instead of pipe. The experiment was successful and using this as a guide, Green designed a house with fiber glass sides, wood rafters and the heat-holding bubble roof.

He said the entire house could be the simple bubble construction, but he needed the rafters to stake the tall tomato plants.

"Because of the bubble construction I will save about 30 percent on heating and cooling," Green said. This would amount to between $2,000 to $3,000 on an acre of greenhouses per season.

He said Goodyear Rubber Co., producers of the polyethylene, are experimenting with 'bubble' type houses that would cover an entire farm. One in construction is a polyethylene sheet secured by a dirt trench that will cover an acre of land. The farm-sized greenhouse is complete with garage type doors that will allow tractors and other farm equipment to enter.

Green said the bubble house has several factors in its favor. Cheaper to build and control temperature, more resistant to hail and wind damage, and tighter for better insect control.

Once just a dream of flavor hungry consumers, the 'summer taste' hot house tomatoes have become a big business and although Green's bubble hot house is the first of its kind in Milam County, growers elsewhere are converting to it. A co-op for hot house tomato growers has been formed in Houston, but so far Green says he sells all the tomatoes he can produce locally - in Temple and Cameron markets.

Green says his busiest season is from August 1 when seeds are planted in a starter greenhouse, until June when vine-ripened field tomatoes come on the market.

The plants, some as much as 14 ft. long, are grown in troughs filled with straw or rice cultures. They must be watered, fertilized, pruned, pollinated and sprayed regularly. Temperature is controlled according to the amount of sun that day.

Green said hot house tomatoes have only been grown commercially in Texas for about 12 years, so many of the problems that come up must be handled by trial and error. He said there are about 150 growers in Texas at present and they share information and new ideas through a regular newsletter.

He said some people complain about the price of hot house tomatoes, but he pointed out that this was low in comparison to the cost of producing in a hot house as opposed to growing tomatoes in a field.

BUBBLE top hot house for commercially grown tomatoes was designed by Forrest Green for his operation at Buckholts. Green says the 'bubble' top hot house, first to be used in Milam County, will save 30 percent on heating and cooling bills and is more resistant to hail and wind damage.

More Urban Planning...

Coming in May is presentation of a 20-year comprehensive plan which will outline what Cameron is most likely to need and be by 1990.

This summary of information, drawn from many sources about people, places and things throughout the com munity and its history, will catalogue the Cameron of the next generation.

City Councilmen have been considering preliminary studies in preamble to the final report. It is a valuable project which gives outline or form to what we may expect, though growth could be more or less, and how to deal with it.

This kind of planning again gives the City of Cameron the kind of direction that urban renewal planning is giving the center city.

Louisianans' Tears

If tears roll down Louisianans' cheeks, our neighbors in Mississippi should understand. We have been reading that their legislators are in session and one of the major problems is handling any surplus in the treasury.

At our last Louisiana session, legislators' chief enterprise was handling any surplus in the taxpayer's pocket.

Letters to the Editor

February 17, 1971

Dear Mr. Luecke:

I would like to express my appreciation to you and your paper for the article "Milam Area Parade of Sports" with picture of the 1908 Cameron ball club, which appeared on Feb. 8th issue.

Being "one of the boys" in this picture it brought back many happy memories, and in checking the faces, I believe I am the only one still living. I spent many pleasant days of baseball from the time of joining this Team until about 1930. Since then I have enjoyed golf and still play every day, weather permitting. Last year I had a real thrill of being lucky enough to make a hole in one.

I will soon be 81 years of age.

I was real pleased too to read in this page from your paper about the improvement projects going on in Cameron. It was surely "good news" and I hope all goes well with the program as planned.

I still have interests in Cameron and visit there occasionally and will be interested in following the results of this fine beginning.

Best wishes,

Most sincerely,

Dear Mr. Luecke:

Welcome to the club. I see by the article in Publishers' Auxiliary that you are running newspaper applications on NCR Century Computer.

Enclosed you will find a list of the applications which we are presently developing for our newspaper. We will be processing these on a Century 100 with 32K of memory and four disc drives starting in September of this year.

Perhaps a cross exchange of ideas between us could result in new approaches and answers to the problems which confront us in the newspaper industry. I would be especially interested in the forms you have developed for obtaining advertising orders into the system and the statements you send your customers.

If there is any information concerning our approach to Data Processing you would want, please feel free to write or call at anytime.

Sincerely yours,

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Oust Student Demonstrators?

May a college student be suspended or expelled from school for taking part in a campus demonstration? The question arises nowadays with growing frequency, and courts are beginning to lay down some guidelines in this sensitive area.

To start with, students have the same freedom of speech, press, and assembly as everyone else in the community. They do not bargain away their constitutional rights just by enrolling in college. Take this case:

A state college decided to nip trouble in the bud by requiring permits for any and all "parades, celebrations, and demonstrations." When students staged a peaceful demonstration without a permit, they were promptly suspended.

But in a court test, the permit rule was struck down as a violation of the freedom of assembly. The court said:

"Colleges, like all other institutions, are subject to the Constitution."

But if colleges are subject to the Constitution, so are students. If college powers are limited, so are student rights.

In another case, some students were suspended for forcibly blocking access to the campus placement office. In court, they invoked their freedom of speech, arguing that blocking the office was simply one way of expressing their opinions.

But a court decided that freedom of speech did not stretch that far. The judge said:

"They have rights guaranteed by the First Amendment. Those rights, however, are not a license to trample upon the rights of others, the enjoyment of which is equally precious."

Likewise, the Fourteenth Amendment — against discrimination — does not prevent the college from exercising reasonable flexibility in meting out punishment.

In another case of student violence, the college imposed tougher penalties on graduate students than on undergraduates. This was challenged in court as discriminatory, on the theory that students who commit the same offense should get the same punishment.

However, the court decided the school's "discrimination" was reasonable enough under the circumstances. The judge said it made sense to expect greater responsibility from older students than from younger students.

FFA WEEK

Members of the FFA are playing an outstanding role in assuring the future progress and prosperity of our community.

The FFA is composed of students who are studying vocational agriculture in the public schools in preparation for careers in farming, ranching, and related fields. In studying the science of agriculture, FFA members are striving to continuously improve this great industry for the welfare of all citizens.

The FFA has performed the valuable service of developing leadership, encouraging cooperation, promoting good citizenship, teaching modern agriculture information, and inspiring patriotism among its members.

HD Agent's Notes...

Your Financial Status

By Christine Laws
Co. Home Dem. Agent

It's the time of year to check up on your finances. Consider your answers to these questions. How am I doing financially? Is my income adequate to easily cover the costs of living? What financial shape would I be in if a large, unexpected bill popped up? Am I able to put funds aside regularly for long-range goals, such as a new house or retirement?

If these questions plague you, now is the time to sit down with the family and figure out where you stand financially.

First list all your assets, including cash on hand and cash in the bank and in savings accounts; securities, such as stocks and bonds; cash value of all life insurance policies, plus any dividends the policies may have accumulated the current market value of any real estate you own; the value of all personal property, such as your car, furniture, appliances, jewelry or sports equipment; and any other assets, such as a coin collection or the amount due on a personal loan.

Next list all your liabilities. Liabilities include the outstanding balance on a mortgage, installment debts and unpaid bills, such as utilities, charge accounts, credit card accounts, unpaid taxes or personal loans.

Add the total value of your assets, then add the total liabilities. Subtract the difference to find your net worth. The difference is the figure that shows what you would receive if you cashed in all your assets and paid all your debts.

The significant thing to plan for is what you will be worth a year from now. Unless you compute your net worth annually, you will never be able to know if you have made progress or not. Some financial experts suggest that an average family with sound financial planning should show at least a 10 percent annual growth in personal net worth over a ten-year period.

Meal Planning For Children

Making mealtime interesting for your children is an easier task if you plan to include the wide assortment of textures, sizes, shapes, and colors available in the foods today.

Each child has different food needs. These needs are influenced by his size, age, activity, growth rate, and ability to digest food.

Plan children's meals to include foods from each of the four food groups -- milk and milk products, meat, fruits and vegetables, and breads and cereals.

Introduce new foods to a child one at a time. If he refuses the food, wait a few days and serve it again. And you can try serving the food on a plate with old favorites for better acceptance.

Large servings on a child's place tend to be overpowering. Serve smaller portions and allow for seconds. Tiny sandwiches that are easily held by small hands can be cut into interesting shapes and sizes to encourage children to eat. Crisp finger foods, such as celery and carrot sticks, also delight the young. Try cutting cheese, meat and other foods into strips to serve as finger foods.

An important thing to remember, is that children generally form good food habits if their early experiences with food are pleasant.

CARTOON ON CANVAS—Comic-strip art continues into spring in a zippy little all-weather jacket of cotton canvas. In primary colors with black and white, it's by Weather Tamer.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Milam Auto Supply Stocks Complete Line Of Vehicle Parts

A complete, modern auto parts center which also has many truck and tractor parts is what Milam Auto Supply, Inc., has become in less than four years.

Owned by corporate partners Jerry Mikula, Ray Goeke and Melvin Provasek, who are also active in its management, Milam Auto Supply is a wholesale center for just about anything that makes an auto run.

And retail specialties like power tools by Black & Decker and Chicago Pneumatic, trailer hitch parts and a line of engine chemicals and compounds make Milam Auto Supply a unique center.

The firm stocks a complete line of standard auto and truck parts for domestic vehicles of most any make and model.

Daily orders are sent to base supply houses each morning at 11. If a part or parts is needed the same day, special delivery by bus can have the part back to the customer that same day.

A service like this is indespensible to mechanics throughout the Milam area and to motorists, particularly having auto work done on a holiday or weekend breakdown.

This kind of service is why Milam Auto Supply, Inc., is growing. Orders for special and foreign auto parts is only part of the story.

It takes the teamwork clearly established by Goeke, Mikula and Provasek. They are assisted by Mrs. Mary Harper, bookkeeper, and Bill Goeke and Chuck Krenek.

Some special machine shop work is available for valve grinding and brake shoes as well as a wide display of auto hand tools for the amateur or professional mechanic.

Brand name parts are standard in Milam Auto Supply, including Champion, Auto - Lite, A-C, Delco, Monroe Shocks, Gates V-belts and brands galore in oil and air filters, and vital engine parts.

Milam Auto's convenient location, a 4,000 square foot display and counter building at 124 North Houston, is across from Cameron Post Office. The operation opened and grew there in April, 1967.

The firm will continue to grow, because Milam Auto Supply owners, managers and employees are interested in serving the professionals who service autos, tractors and trucks throughout the Milam area.

Cameron Motors: Chevrolet & Household Center

Cameron Motor Co, of course, is the franchised Chevrolet dealership where new 1971's now are on display in an enlarging showroom and where complete auto service awaits.

This household center in butane and natural gas equipment is complete unrough Central Butane offices and availability of Gulf and Goodrich tires and batteries.

R. W. Wells, owner of Cameron Motor Co., assures that complete automotive service is made possible with front-end alignment and wheelbalancing equipment and competent personnel.

And Travis Trotter, automotive manager, brings capable sales background to new and used car sales, emphasizing the 1971 Chevrolet line of cars and trucks which now is available, following the recently ended GM strike.

If it is household equipment needs in either butane or natural gas, Central Butane offers a complete household equipment lineup: central heating and air conditioning, kitchen ranges, heaters, waterheaters, a complete offering of first-line equipment.

Gulf tire and battery products are added to availability of a complete parts department for Chevrolet cars and trucks. Cameron Motor mechanics know tractor needs, particularly in tires.

Jack DuBois, is manager of Central Butane.

Associated with Cameron Motor Co. is the Charles Chandler Body Shop, where complete automotive body repair and "styling" is part of the automotive picture.

The whole operation is housed in about 18,000 square feet of modern, paneled offices, display and sales rooms and offices at Cameron Motor Co.

Work underway will allow greater display room of used cars on the Fourth St. front of the Chevrolet agency and additional display room for new Chevrolets.

Wells started the transformation in June, when he purchased the Chevrolet franchise and instituted Cameron Motor Co,

It even includes a bulldozer and heavy equipment service, another element of Wells development around Cameron Motor Co.

So if it's for complete automotive and household gas equipments needs, Cameron Motor Co. and related service is the place.

Channel Catfish Raised Commercially In Cages

By George Jaster
Soil-Water Conservationist

Raising catfish in cages is very similar in many ways to raising chickens or hogs in high concentrations. This method of producing catfish eliminates many of the problems which occur in raising catfish loose in ponds or pits.

Briefly, raising catfish in cages is a practice which puts a given number of fingerlings in a wire cage, feeding them daily until they are a desirable size. This method can be adapted to a large commercial operation or just producing fish for one family.

The advantages of using cages over letting the fish loose in a pond are many. Harvesting is easier, faster and is done with less labor and equipment. Less water is needed because the ponds do not have to be drained to harvest the fish. The greatest advantage is that it can be adapted to any dependable water source where ever good clean water is available.

The disadvantages of a caged operation are few but should be studied carefully before going into caged channel catfish operation. The only food the fish will get is what is fed to them, so a balanced ration is a must. Disease is a problem because of the high concentration of fish in a small area. Water quality is very important as the water should contain enough oxygen for the fish to breathe or they will suffocate.

A caged catfish operation can be started in any good size farm pond, pit or lake. The cage can be made of most anything but welded wire coated with a asphalt base paint and supported by 2 x 2 inch wooden frame has been used with good results. A wire mesh 1/2 x 1/2 inch is small enough to hold 4 1/2 inch fingerlings and larger. A cage of 3 feet wide, 3 feet deep and 4 feet long will raise 500 channel catfish to a weight of one pound in 180 days. The cage should have a lid with a feeding box in it.

The feeding box is a bottomless and topless box built into the lid to allow feed to be thrown into the box and not be carried away by the current or wind. Up to 5 cages of this size can be put in a surface acre and produce 2500 fish per surface acre. The cage should be placed in open water away from obstructions.

Cages should be suspended 4 inches above the water using styrofoam or other similar material. The cage bottom should clear the pond bottom by at least 1 foot.

The caged channel catfish should be fed once a day, early in the morning seven days a week with a complete catfish food. The best type of feed would be a floating pelleted type which will reduce waste and the fish can be observed feeding.

Feeding rates should be adjusted to fish weight but all feed should be consumed in less than five minutes after feeding. The fish should be checked at feeding time for low oxygen levels. The fish should be handled as gently and infrequently as possible.

Disease can be treated by enclosing the cage with a plastic bag and applying the proper medication.

The expected production of channel cat fish in ponds is around 2,000 lbs. per surface acre. These would be fish that were started at .05 lbs. in April and harvested at 1 lb. in Sept. They could dress out at 60% of live body weight.

For more information on commercial caged catfish production contact your local Soil and Water Conservation District or the Texas Agriculture Extension Service.

Nader Says Need New Definition Of Patriot

WACO

Americans must develop a new citizenship and patriotism that perfects, defends and puts the betterment of man first before organizationalism, Ralph Nader said Monday (Feb. 15) at Baylor University.

"Patriotism is not found just in the battlefields," Nader said. "We need a new definition of patriotism. A patriot is a person who changes slums, a person who develops a kind of system that makes improvements."

Nader, called by Time magazine the "U.S.'s toughest customer," was in Waco to speak during a Baylor chapel program. A lawyer, he first made headlines in 1965 with his book "Unsafe at Any Speed," an indictment that lambasted Detroit for producing unsafe vehicles.

He has been single-handedly responsible for at least six major federal consumer protection laws, for the elimination of monosodium glutamate (MSG) from baby foods, the cessation of the production of General Motors car, Corvair, and advances in the area of pollution control, safety and advertising credibility.

Nader said we have the affluence to solve problems, but we must liberate the solutions to do the job. The traditional form of citizenship has been part-time up to now considered a hobby or volunteer work, he said.

"We don't look at citizenship as a profession," Nader said. "We need supercitizens."

Nader suggested developing the ethics of the athletic world, such as "don't quit."

"In citizenship there are a lot of quitters," Nader said. "There were quitters after April 22, 1970 (Earth Day), as if U.S. Steel only polluted on April 22, 1970."

Nader said the greatest form of mass violence in the United States today is not crime in the streets but environmental pollution -- the massive production of cars. the fact that 25 million people are starving, the mass exposure of migrant workers to pesticides and lead in the blood of black children in urban areas.

Disobedience and unenforced laws are the cause of this mass violence, he said.

"If we obeyed the laws in the country, we would have no polluted rivers," Nader said. Since 1899 it has been unlawful in this country to dump industrial wastes and materials into rivers.

We have got to have doctors, lawyers and persons, he said, who will work outside of an organization for the safety of his fellowman.

"We need professional society laws outside that will preserve safety inside," he said. "We can no longer depend on organizations. They are being condemned from the inside."

The last resort in a democracy is to appeal to the citizens, Nader said. The fight Nader speaks of will take a stamina that would wear most people down, he said, unless a person changes his life style.

"We must realize that this country has more pioneering to do than it has ever done before," he said.

Nader cited incidents in which students were actively involved in findings of hazardous conditions. The recent mercury findings in fish were the result of a graduate student's thesis.

"Fortunately you are living in a student generation more aware," Nader said. "This generation has the flexibility, mobility and idealism to make it different.

"A great many forces will go to work on you to keep you from speaking your mind," Nader said. There are those "who say you get along by going along.

"As long as people 'get along by going along,' the country will get deeper in problems," he said. "When you observe a pattern of behavior that is full of fraud, you'll have to choose what role you'll play here."
